Roosevelt Letter To Japan Said To Be Very Strong Paper By Japanese.

RUSSIA AWAITS JAPAN'S ANSWER

Reports From Tokio That The Japanese Prefer To Win
Another Land Battle Before Considering
Any Talk Of Peace.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.]

London, June 10.—It is stated authoritatively today that Japan is not desirous of negotiating peace just now and it believes it would be much better for the lasting nature of a peace agreement if hostilities did not end until after the next great land battle. Japan is confident Oyama is able to administer a decisive defeat to Linévitch, which will enable the Japanese to enforce more advantageous terms, including the disarmament of Vladivostok.

Will Not Meet Them

St. Petersburg, June 10.—It is stated on reliable authority that the czar has decided not to receive the deputation of Zemstvos congress of Moscow, selected to present the address which was adopted Thursday. The deputation will endeavor to secure an audience with the Emperor on Monday.

Are Favorable

London, June 10.—It is stated on good authority here that Russia and Japan look favorably upon Roosevelt's suggestion for peace and that a meeting of the representatives of the two powers is now being arranged.

Agree With Roosevelt

Tokio, June 10.—Japan has agreed to Roosevelt's suggestion to appoint plenipotentiaries to meet the Russian plenipotentiaries.

Washington, June 10.—Referring to the President's note on peace, Minister Takahara said today: "It is the most admirable state paper I have ever known. It is based upon the noble idea of humanity and civilization and must be regarded as a beacon of light for future international transactions. I am sure the suggestion made in that manner by the President will be promptly accepted by Japan."

Roosevelt Brings Peace

Evidence accumulates that President Roosevelt's efforts in behalf of peace have been supported by practically every European power by the advice that it is the solemn conviction of all the powers that the time has arrived for Russia and Japan to conclude peace. President Roosevelt's endeavors were limited to bringing the plenipotentiaries of Russia and Japan together to arrange the preliminary terms for the conclusion of a limited armistice and the selection of a place for the future negotiations. The ambassador of one of the great European powers expressed the opinion that the exchanges would not occur either at Washington or at any European capital, but upon the battlefield in Manchuria.

Make Terms on the Field

"Both Russia and Japan desire to conduct the negotiations direct," said the ambassador. "Where is there a better place than Manchuria, which is beyond the sphere of outside influence, is practically neutral territory, and is in direct communication with the respective diplomats? Linévitch and Oyama, confronting each other upon the field where they fought, could arrange the preliminaries. Once the main principles as to the indemnity, the status of Sakhalin and Vladivostok, and the question of the Russian ships in neutral waters in the far east are adjusted, all other questions could easily be settled."

Czar Holds a Council

A council of ministers presided over by the emperor in person was held at Tsarskoe Selo to discuss the situation in regard to the present developments. His majesty's brother, Grand Duke Michael, who has arrived here from Berlin, is believed to be the bearer of a personal message from Emperor William advising the conclusion of peace.

Ambassador Meyer was in constant communication with Washington. He received a long cipher dispatch, and soon afterwards hurried to the foreign office, where he had half an hour's earnest conversation with Foreign Minister Lamsdorff.

Extreme reticence continues to be manifested, but it is apparent that the great announcement for which the world is waiting will not be made from here or from Tokio, but from Washington. It is not likely to be delayed beyond Monday at the latest.

Preparing Public for Peace

The government plainly is preparing the public for the announcement that the emperor has decided to conclude peace and that the negotiations have begun, by permitting the publication of all foreign dispatches bearing on the subject. The newspapers and the Russian public, however, have until now only had a suspicion that important moves were going on behind the scenes.

The government is preparing to time the proclamation of a national assembly with the announcement that peace negotiations have begun. The committee of ministers is hurrying through its examination of the Boulgin rescript commission's project for the "imperial edict" scheme. Practically no alterations are being made in the text and the review of the report is purely formal, as a manifesto promulgating a law giving the Russian people a voice in legislation is already drafted. It is expected the law will be proclaimed early next week.

BIGELOW GETS ONLY TEN YEAR SENTENCE

Man Who Stole Millions to Go to Prison for Ten Years at Hard Labor.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.]

Milwaukee, Wis., June 10.—At 2:25 this afternoon F. G. Bigelow pleaded guilty before Judge Charles in the federal court and was sentenced to ten years at hard labor.

Small Punishment

This is the punishment for one of the most colossal bank wreckings of modern times. Frank G. Bigelow secured anywhere from one dollar to three and a quarter million and reports of failures of concerns he was interested in are still coming in. Milwaukee, Wis., June 10.—W. C. Mertens, in a petition to the referee in bankruptcy, charges fraud against F. G. Bigelow and asks the Wisconsin Trust company to show cause why it holds 150 shares of American District Telegraph company stock in trust for the benefit of Mertens as receiver of the Wisconsin Automatic Fire Service company. It is charged that Bigelow, as trustee, refused to transfer the stock with a willful intent to defraud.

To Plead Guilty

It is stated the grand jury meets at two this afternoon and Bigelow will plead guilty to the charges of conspiracy to defraud and the other indictments.

Another Failure

The Northwestern Straw Works Co. of Milwaukee of which Frank Bigelow was vice-president, was thrown into involuntary bankruptcy today on a petition of Schoellkopf, Westphal and Hauna of Milwaukee and others.

Will End All

To a friend this morning Bigelow said: "The anxiety and doubt is far worse than the most awful truth. I wish to God it was all over." To United States Attorney Butterfield he said: "Butterfield, have it over with. I will plead guilty this afternoon."

AN ENGLISH COXEY'S ARMY ON THE MARCH

Several Thousand Unemployed Workmen Demonstrate Before English Parliament.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, June 10.—Several thousand unemployed men from the leading factory centers of the country marching on this city today for a demonstration in favor of the Unemployed Bill, now before Parliament. The demonstration was organized by James K. Hardie, socialist and independent member of parliament, and well-known labor leader, assisted by other labor agitators. The men were advised to throw the responsibility for the maintenance of their wives and children while they joined the pilgrimage, and children have been directed to demand food in the schools. It is unlikely, however, that a demonstration will be sent to parliament, for fear that they will meet the fate of Gribble, the leader of the delegation from the army bootmakers from Northamptonshire, who was thrown out of the Speaker's Gallery in the House of Commons May 12, after attempting to address the House.

KANSAS WANTS THE EASTERN STUDENTS

A Record Crop of Wheat Will Be Harvested There This Year,
and College Men Are Liked.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Topeka, Kans., June 10.—Kansas has completed plans for the reception of the great army of harvesters who will come here from Oklahoma at the wane of the season which begins in the territory today. This year Kansas has the largest wheat crop in her history and the farmers have sent out appeals to eastern college students to come here and help them harvest their great crop. Last year the best harvesters came from New York and New England. The farmers say these young men come to Kansas to develop their muscles and they simply will not be outdone and for this reason make the best harvest hands. Kansas needs about 40,000 extra men to work this season. Starting with the Oklahoma harvest, the laborers who come from the east will follow the ripening fields of Kansas, then journeying to Nebraska where their work will finish about July 25. The wages are $2 to $2.50 per day with board. Although some have predicted that the harvest this year will be 100,000,000 bushels, conservative farmers who have watched conditions in former years say that the total yield will not exceed 75,000,000 bushels.

NORWAY PLANS FOR A REPUBLIC

Arrangements Are Under Way For Calling A National Convention Soon.

MAY NOT RECOGNIZE NEW STATE

Russia And Germany Await King Oscar's Consent To The Separation Before Taking Any Definite Action.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.]

Copenhagen, June 10.—It is understood that arrangements are actually under way for a national convention in Norway, and this, it is believed, will inevitably result in the declaration of a republic.

All hope that King Oscar or Crown Prince Gustave will yield to the request of the storting to place a prince of the house of Bernadotte on the throne of Norway has disappeared, according to a high authority. The Danish royal family also has set the stamp of disapproval on the acceptance of the throne by a Danish prince.

Must Have King's Sanction.
According to well informed persons here, Russia and Germany will refuse to recognize a Norwegian government until King Oscar consents to the disruption of the union. Strong efforts are being made to secure similar action by other governments, including that of Denmark, and it is stated that these efforts are meeting with encouragement.

The Norwegian press and people, according to advices received here, remain singularly undemonstrative. Premier Michelsen wants no demonstrations, and refused to permit a large procession of Christians in approval of the action of the storting. The premier said:
"It is too early to claim a victory."

Raise Flag of Norway

Christiania, June 10.—The Norwegian tricolor was hoisted Friday over Akershus fort and throughout the country in place of the union flag. The substitution was attended with great ceremony at the fort, where the members of the storting and 30,000 of the public were assembled. The garrison was paraded and the commandant read the resolution of the storting dissolving the union with Sweden. As the clock in the tower of the fort chimed ten, the union flag, which had floated there since 1814, was hauled down, the troops presented arms, the band played the patriotic "Sons of Norway," and a national salute was fired. The people cheered wildly and all joined in singing national hymns.

Baron von Wedel-Jarlsberg, minister of Sweden and Norway at Madrid; Minister Grip, at Washington, and the minister at Rome, all of whom are Norwegians, have resigned and are leaving their posts for Christiania.

SOLDIERS NEEDED IN RURAL PROVINCES

Condition in the Philip-

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.]

Large bands of outlaws are committing serious depredations in the Cavite province.

ARMY AND NAVY WILL
"BATTLE" OVER POSSESSION

Prominent Officials of Both Forces
Will Witness the Maneuvers.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Baltimore, Md., June 10.—Between the army and navy of the United States there will commence tomorrow a bitter but bloodless warfare. The scene will be along the Chesapeake bay and the Potomac and Patuxent rivers, with the capture of Baltimore and Washington the objective point of the navy, and their defense the objective point of the army. So far as possible the two forces will duplicate the attack and the defense in 1814. Beginning the engagement, the fleet will make attacks on Forts Howard, McHenry, Smallwood, Armistead and Carroll, which are garrisoned by 2,000 troops of the Coast Artillery. The lower forts will be attacked first, and if the ships succeed in capturing them or getting by them, both Baltimore and Washington will have been bombarded—in the minds of the naval officers. The struggle will extend from end to end of the bay, but the only land defense will be the artillery men. Infantry will not be put into play in the mimic warfare. The question whether the army or navy won will be decided by two officers of the army, two officers of the navy and a fifth officer selected by vote. It has been decided that the invading fleet shall be cut off entirely from land communication. The thick of the fight on paper will be at the modern defenses of Baltimore. They are Forts Howard and Smallwood, at the mouth of the Patuxent river, and Fort Armistead, the chief of the inner fort defending Baltimore. Dummy mines have been placed and connected with cables leading to shore at Fort Howard. The torpedo planter, Col. George C. Armistead, has figured prominently in the placing of these mines. The maneuvers will be witnessed by a large number of officers of the army and navy.

Arm Tattooed With Dates.

The arm of a well known London gentleman might well be described as a genealogical tree, for it is rapidly being covered with dates. In addition to his own and his wife's birth dates and the record of their marriage, he has the name and date of the birth of each of his children.

"What Energy weaves by Lethargy is undone." A merchant whose enterprise is intermittent creates a big day's business by energetic advertising
—then lets things drag for a week until "the spirit moves him" again.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Lieutenant Governor Bruce addressed a large class of graduates from the Packard Commercial School in New York not long since, in which he impressed upon the boys the fact that there had never been a time in which there was such a demand for young men as today.

He said the demand was for young men almost exclusively. Every business enterprise was seeking for them. Only the demand was for young men thoroughly prepared for business. This emphasized the importance of a business education.

Dr. Cadman also addressed the class, confirming the statement of the lieutenant-governor.

The door of opportunity, he said,
was before every one. But on this door was written the word "push,"
and he who would enter was obliged to push.

There are scores of young men who complain that the opportunities of life are less numerous today than they were 25 years ago; and that centralization of capital and combination in business have closed the door to many enterprises which were open to their fathers.

There was a time when the boy could enter his father's store in the country town, master the business, and in the end gratify ambition by succeeding to the business.

Or, if his tastes were along mechanical lines, he could learn a trade and in a few years have a shop of his own and make a comfortable living, enjoying the independence which comes to every man who works for himself.

But conditions have changed in the commercial as well as the industrial world and the evolution which is constantly going on amounts in many cases to a complete revolution.

The survival of the fittest is the only law that governs, for there is neither sentiment nor fine spun philosophy in business.

A machine is invented which does the work of a dozen men, and as a result an army of skilled workmen find themselves out of employment.

Machine-made goods take the place
of hand-made, and the shoe maker
and harness maker is no longer in demand.

A manufacturer decides to dispense with the middlemen and sells direct to the consumer, or he places his goods in the hands of mail order houses or department stores and the small merchant finds it difficult to meet competition and frequently retires from the field.

There is a town in the northern part of the state which supports the largest department store in the state
outside of Milwaukee, and the statement is made that 19 smaller merchants have been compelled to retire from the field.

People who are injured complain of these conditions and argue that rank injustice has been committed, but public sentiment recognizes neither justice nor sympathy in business.

The wife of the small merchant visits the city for bargains and patronizes the houses which compete in the home territory for business.

The man who is crowded to the wall because of competition, or who is driven from his bench because of improved machinery is the victim of circumstances beyond his control,
but the world never stops to condole
with him.

The public printing office at Washington employs 3,000 men. It is a closer corporation than any private enterprise in the country, as the product, which last year amounted to $6,000,000, is sold to one customer, the government, and prices are never questioned.

The "shop", however, is twenty years behind the times, in point of equipment, because every effort to modernize it has been resisted in the interests of the men employed.

The Linotype machine, which does the work of half a dozen men, and which has been in use for years in all private offices of any importance, was not permitted in the government office because it would displace a lot of pensioners who had grown gray in the service.

Finally the pressure for reform was so heavy that 35 of these machines were installed last year and an investigation is now going on which may result in putting the business on a business basis, where it belongs.

The age is progressive and people are not inclined to wait for victims of circumstances or misfortune, who are unable to keep pace with the procession.

The greatest good to the greatest number is the unwritten law which governs and it is as mandatory as any statute ever enacted.

Results, in some cases, may seem unjust and far from the ideal, but they are cold stubborn facts which no amount of theorizing or sentiment will change.

But what has all this to do with the young man and his opportunities?
Simply this. The day has passed when a young man can go out into life and meet with ordinary success without special preparation for his work.

This preparation demands more than it did 20 years ago. While he may not be able to see far enough into the future to determine just what revolution may accomplish along certain lines, he can distinguish the fact that the trend of the age is toward centralization.

The trust and the combine may be regarded as vicious but they are here, and as yet only in their infancy.

The great railway and transportation companies find it necessary to work together to meet demands placed upon them.

The manufacturer is forced by competition to distribute his goods at the lightest possible expense and he will continue to favor the largest markets.

The inventor cannot be throttled
and he will give the world the benefit of genius along the lines of labor saving machinery.

This does not mean that a few people will perform the work, or that a favored class will conduct the business of the country.

It is a noticeable fact that in spite of rapid development, there is less voluntary idleness today than ever before.

The question for the young man to consider is more than a question of work. He can find that in any community. The demand today in every department is for young men who can do some one thing expertly.

He is not required to master the details of a business. If he can handle a single department and get to the head of it, he is assured of a better income with less responsibility than the average inland merchant.

Great enterprises—and the world is full of them today—demand an army of expert workers. The door of opportunity was never more inviting,
but special preparation and push are necessary to success.

Governor Cummins of Iowa stated
before the Interstate Commerce Commission that the railroads had made his state the greatest agricultural state in the union. Some one asked him what had become of the factories,
and at last reports he hadn't found out.

Uncle Ike still has the privilege to visit the state capital. He may not live long enough to sit in the senate at Washington, but it ought to be worth something to hold the bag for his friends.

The state administration is making another grandstand play about "no taxes for the next two years." It is safe to gamble that the taxpayers will never know the difference.

The Nonesuch Bros. have given Janesville a state wide reputation as Fourth of July entertainers. Their efforts this year will eclipse all previous records, and set a new pace for the modern circus.

The assessors and tax collectors

PRESS COMMENT.

Green Bay Gazette: And so the state is not to have the fun of voting on a change in capital location after all.

Chicago News: Any one who wearies waiting for the Fourth of July may just put his fingers in the electric fan to see how fast it is going around.

Eau Claire Leader: Wisconsin can not point with any pride to the Portland world's fair. We couldn't even raise a paltry ten thousand to erect a state building.

Rockford Register-Gazette: The
dandelion also looms up just at present as among other important yellow herbs. Then there are the tan shoes, too.

Exchange: Do not ask a lady if she remembers the last time the seventeen-year tourists were here. That would imply that seventeen years ago
she was able to sit up and notice things.

Racine Journal: The great increase in the immigration this year it is said will add twenty per cent to the number of men looking for employment as laborers.

Milwaukee News: Though it was a close call, Messrs. Bashford and Barnes will be given their reward for faithful service and their names will be inscribed upon the roll of honor.

Appleton Crescent: Secretary Shaw
gravely announces that he is not prepared to say that he will be the republican candidate for the presidency.
Neither is the Republican party.

Superior Telegram: The Milwaukee
News says that a Rhinelander chemist has discovered an extract 1,000 times stronger than beer. Four per cent of beer is alcohol, so that we presume
the new extract is 4,000 per cent alcohol.

Menasha Herald: In this month of brides one Johann Hoch is to stretch hemp and dance on nothing, all because he paid too much and two wrongful an attention to the marrimonial question. Who said something about the eternal fitness of things!

El Paso Herald: Cynical observers attribute part of Cortelyou's meteoric rise in life to his remarkable powers
as a listener—that is a qualification that at once attracts attention in Washington and earns for its fortunate possessor both gratitude and favor.

Chicago News: At Sheboygan they are catching fish in the mud holes in the streets. Here is something our beneficent government overlooked.
Why not stock up our streets with spawns in the early spring so that those who cannot go away for a vacation may sit in their second-story windows and accumulate fish stories?

Exchange: A miner was heard explaining the meaning of the word
"phenomenon." "Naow," said he, "a stream in a valley isn't a phenomenon, nayther is a boss heyting grass.
But if 'ee see a butterfly drawin' a load of hay or a caow (cow) zoarin'
in the sky and zinging like a lark,
call they phenomenons."

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: That was a graceful act on the part of Admiral Togo in calling on his vanquished foe, Admiral Rojestvensky, at the hospital and expressing a wish for his complete recovery. It is gratifying, indeed, to know that the Russian commander is in a fair way to recover from his serious injuries.

Appleton Post: For the sake of the country, as well as for his own reputation, it is much to be desired that Admiral Dewey be gullible of the bombastic remark attributed to him
in which he is said to have declared that the United States still holds the record in modern naval warfare, referring, of course, to his own victory at Manila as contrasted with the notable one achieved by Admiral Togo.

Sheboygan Journal: Voting machine
men who have in charge the model machine which has been shown to the legislature at Madison, declare that the argument of Governor La Follette in his veto that voting machines are not so arranged that they could be used in primary elections is without foundation and that any machine could be arranged just as well
for the primary as for the main election ballot. If this is correct it is a pity the voting machine can not be used in the primaries, as it is the experience of all cities that have used them that a far better registration of the ballots can be obtained by their use than by any ballot system yet devised.

La Crosse Tribune: Former Sen-

be relieved. He is heavier by sev-

HORSE PLUNGED INTO DEEP PIT

AFTER MAD RACE DOWN NORTH FIRST STREET.

SEVERAL HAD CLOSE CALL

Edward Hughes was at work in area in front of Pierson's store—Fred Palmer, the driver, got bad fall.

Halfway down the North First street hill, shortly before 1 o'clock this morning, a frisky young horse drawing the light delivery cart belonging to E. R. Winslow's grocery started with a bound to make a race-track of the highway. As it did so the clip broke, the two front wheels and axle parted with the body of the vehicle, and in the twinkling of an eye Fred Palmer, the driver, was jerked to the street and the box of the cart pitched over on top of him.

Plunged into Area
As the animal tried to turn southward on North Main street at break-neck speed it was unable to make the sharp curve and plunged into the open area in front of F. F. Pierson's store where several men were at work laying iron stringers for a new sidewalk. How the horse cleared the plank running from the doorway to the curb and escaped impaling itself on an upright timber directly in its way in the narrow eight-foot excavation, and landed on its feet in the bottom, were mysteries to everyone who witnessed the incident. City Engineer Kerch and his assistants, Messrs. Frank Kimball and Kerch, who were at work making measurements for the curbing at this particular spot, and Edward Hughes, one of the masons at work in the hole, all had narrow escapes. The surveyors saw the runaway horse, but expected it to clear the corner. They just had time to step aside as the horse dashed over the curbing. Mr. Hughes was at work on the further wall and was saved from being ground down under the horse's feet by a margin of about 2 1/2 feet.

Driver Badly Shaken Up
Fred Palmer, the driver who was hurled from his seat in the delivery rig, was badly shaken up and bruised. After he had been extricated from the wagon Dr. Judd was sent for. It was feared at first that some of his ribs were broken, but this proved not to be the case. The horse received a long ugly cut in the chest but beyond that seems to have escaped serious injury. It was gotten out of the area by the firemen from the East Side station, who after disentangling the harness, thills and two wheels which were poised in an odd manner above the level of the walk, succeeded in leading the beast through a window into the basement of the building and up the steps of the rear cellar-way.

JUNIORS DECORATE FOR COMMENCEMENT

Members of '06 Beautify the Auditorium with Orange and Black Trimmings.

With bunting and paper chrysanthemums of orange and black the auditorium of the high school building is being transformed from a barren barnlike hall into a gathering place of beauty in preparation for the commencement exercises next week. The work is being done by the members of the Junior class, '06, under the direction of a committee of that body which consists of Earl Brown, Hazel Dewey, Paul Porter, Alice Roherty, Jerome Davis, Clara Holt, Floyd Davis and Verna Bennison. The colors used in the decoration scheme are those of the graduating class. The iron girders are being wound with bunting of the shades and in the center of the ceiling is hung a huge umbrella trimmed with chrysanthemums. On each side of the stage a pillar will be constructed and the capitals will be made of the same flowers which predominate the entire decorations. The class motto is: "Deeds Not Words," and this will be hung above the stage and for the first time will be illuminated with electric lights.

ARRANGE GRADES IN GARFIELD BUILDING

Territories of New School and Lincoln Building Distinguished—Teachers Appointed.

Arrangements are now being made for the accommodation of next year of the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grade public school pupils who reside in the district heretofore covered by the Lincoln school. The opening of the new Garfield school building on South Jackson street at the intersection of Union will relieve the over-crowded grammar grades of the Lincoln and furnish a place for those pupils who this year have attended school outside of the district in which they live.

New Districts
In order to equalize the number of pupils in the corresponding grades of the Lincoln and Garfield schools next year Superintendent Buell has mapped out the new districts, which need but the approval of the board of education to be made permanent. Those who will be sent to the Garfield school are the ones who reside in the territory bounded on the north by the center of School street, on the west by the center of Cherry and on the east by the river and all those who live in Spring Brook. Those who will attend the Lincoln school are the residents west of the center of Cherry street and north of the center of School in the fourth and fifth wards.

NEW GARFIELD SCHOOL, CORNER JACKSON AND UNION STREETS

Teachers Appointed
The Garfield building is all but complete now, the placing of furniture, being the only thing undone. The teachers have been appointed and the rooms assigned as follows: eighth grade—Miss Bertha Swales, teacher; south room on the second floor; seventh grade—Miss Genevieve Hayes, teacher, north room on the second floor; sixth grade—Miss Margaret McGiffin, teacher, south room on the first floor; fifth grade—Miss Lucy Aiken, teacher, north room on the first floor. Miss Swales will be the principal of the school.

Lincoln Teachers
It is possible that there will be no eighth grade in the Lincoln building next year and no teacher for such has been appointed. The personnel of the Lincoln teaching force follows: sixth grade—Miss Helen Welch, principal; seventh grade—Miss Sarah Venable; fourth—Miss Catherine Enright; third—Miss Harriet Rogers; first and second—Miss Elizabeth Harris.

BLUE STAMPS APPEAR DOOMED

DISTRIBUTING STATION IS BESIEGED BY ANXIOUS PATRONS.

CEASE GIVING THE STAMPS

Several Firms in the Association Stop Giving Out the Stamps to Their Patrons.

From present appearances it would seem that the Janesville Trading Association, which has been giving out blue trading stamps as premiums on purchases, had come to an end of its existence. All day long the holders of the premium books have been crowding to Heimstreet's drugstore, where the stamps are redeemed, and Mr. Heimstreet and his corps of clerks have been kept on a rush answering the demands for the goods the stamps called for. From the moment the rumor first started this morning until many of the firms that were members of the Janesville Trading Association stopped giving out stamps the rush continued and when these firms ceased handing out a blue stamp for each ten-cent purchase the rush began to grow in dimension and the report was current that the business of the association would be closed at noon. This, however, proved to be erroneous and the goods were handed out as fast as demanded.

NEW GARFIELD SCHOOL, CORNER JACKSON AND UNION STREETS

Knows Nothing
E. B. Heimstreet, who is the distributor of the premiums, stated this noon that he did not know what had caused the rush. It simply came. That the firms that had stopped handing out stamps had merely done so to avoid making the rush for the premiums less if possible and that he did not know what the outcome would be. One of the merchants prominent in the stamp business said that they had ceased giving stamps because they had a tip it would be safer for them to do so and avoid any unpleasantness in the future. Other firms followed suit and by three o'clock only a few of the twelve firms in the association gave the stamps freely, although all handed them out when requested except J. M. Bostwick & Sons, George E. King and Frank H. Buack.

The Rush

The rush in Heimstreet's store this morning was most amusing. Women and children with books and some men, hastened to the store as fast as the possibility of the association stopping became talked of with their stamp books to be redeemed. Some had six hundred, some had a thousand, some even four or five books, and they all wanted to be waited on at once. Men carried out huge rockers and looked around for a wagon to convey their find home; women had chairs and little desks or bits of cut-glass or silver; delivery wagons were backed up and loaded with all sorts of curiosities, and many women secured premiums that they did not care for simply to get something for their stamps before the final crash came.

Whispered Consultations

Premiums would be selected and then whispered consultations would be held between the owner of two hundred, the owner of one hundred and the owner of three hundred stamps as to the advisability of taking such and such an article. A decision would be reached and then it would be found someone else had secured it and then the consultations had all to be gone over again. It was whispered that any minute the goods which the association had in stock was to be attached and this acted as a stimulus to the stamp-holders and they made haste to secure their premiums and get away.

RADICAL BILL BY JIM FREAR KILLED

Senate Takes a Fall Out of the Senator From Hudson This Morning.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., June 10.—The senate today killed the Frear bill to limit the issue of stocks and bonds of railroad companies on property in Wisconsin. Senator Frear made a long argument for the measure and Senators Whitehead and Roehr opposed it as impracticable to attempt in this state to supervise and regulate the issue of securities which may be made for the purpose of building a road or a branch in another state. The final vote was 8 to 18. The Frear bill for the same purpose was laid over for an amendment and may be fixed up and passed. The assembly joint resolution looking toward a constitutional convention was killed. The bill to authorize the appointment of an inspector for rural schools of the state was killed, the argument being made that it was useless to hire one man to inspect all of the 7,000 country schools of the state.

A Little Man Like

Simplicity of Life

TOGO THE JAPANESE NELSON

By J. A. EDGERTON

A Satsuma Samurai
And a Christian

A Firm Believer
In Poise of Soul

A Champion of the Gospel of Action

BEWARE of the silent man in war. There was Grant, and there is Togo. In other words besides economy of words the Japanese admiral resembles the American general in love of his family, in his simple and domestic tastes, in going direct to an object, in the power of choosing and using subordinates and, most important of all, in striking the first blow. Hit the enemy swiftly and unexpectedly, before he has time to hit you. Both men followed that plan. Here is another point of resemblance—neither Grant nor Togo ever lost a battle.

Self Contained, Wiry and Alert.

Togo—by the way, call it Tongo if you would pronounce it as the Japs do—is a little man, even for a Japanese, and they are by no means large. He is only a trifle over five feet up and down. It will be remembered also that Napoleon was a little man physically. The world has had a number of big little men. It is never well to judge of the stature of a man's mind and soul by that of his body. Togo looks the sea captain—bronzed by weather, wiry and alert. His face is not unlike that of a European, as he lacks the oriental slant of the eye and wears a close cropped beard, sparse, but bristly, and growing iron gray. Small as he is, there is about him a certain air of command that attracts attention. He is poised, self contained, ever ready. He is one of the impressive sort, that would stand unmoved in the presence of an earthquake. Beneath this iron by all. Three results can be traced to these few years of British association—first, the admiral speaks English like a native; second, he is a Christian, a rare thing among Japan's officers; third, he follows British naval ideas and tactics.

Strict Disciplinarian.

Admiral Togo, whose other name is Heihachiro, is forty-eight years of age. He is not of noble birth, though now a baron. He struck the first blow in two wars, that between China and Japan and the present one. In the former he sank the British transport Kowshing,

"Well, that will be all right," said Togo. "Goodbye." And, bowing, he left the room.

An Impressive Ceremony.

Arriving at his flagship, the admiral piped his officers on board. Here was surely the time to make a speech, Togo merely brought out a small table and placed thereon a short sword, with the point toward the officers. No word he spoke, but they understood. That meant they were either to win or commit harakiri, the Japanese form of suicide. And they were glad. They knew this man. He did things.

The world is familiar with Togo's subsequent history. It remembers his laconic order resulting in the first blow struck at Port Arthur. Other nations were surprised at the suddenness and success of the stroke. Not so the Japanese. "Why should we be?" they asked. Togo was in command. That meant the attack would be immediately.

Since then victory has followed victory, and the latest, that over Rojostevsky—or is it Rojostevsky—is greatest of all.

Admiral Togo is a hard worker. Here is one of his laconic utterances on the subject. "In the present age quick and simple action is the only way to succeed, either in military or civil life."

He knows men. Rarely does he make a mistake in choosing a subordinate. So great is his capacity in this direction that a saying has become current in Japan. "There is only one com exterior, however, is fire. The gleam of the eye reveals that.

The "Ogre Admiral."

This man, who has wiped out two Russian fleets and will wipe out others if the ear is so ill advised as to put them in the way, has reasons for his immobile exterior. First, there is his race. The men of Nippon are not particularly demonstrative, especially if they are Satsuma samurai, as Togo is. This is the clan, by the way, that furnished Japan's other great sea fighter, Saigo. It is perhaps the most renowned fighting clan in the island empire, and other Togos have made the name famous in its annals. With such hereditary who can wonder at the stoical front of the "ogre admiral," as he is affectionately called? Then his training was not conducive to effusiveness or efficiency. One incident will serve to make this clear. Japanese youths who are being prepared for the navy are subjected to certain ordeals. One of these is a banquet, at which the boys sit around a circular table, in the middle of which is a loaded cannon, which constantly turns so that first one then another can look into its muzzle. The boys know that some time during the evening the charge will be set off by a man outside the room. The ball may pass between two banqueters or it may take off a head in its flight. Iron nerves result from education such as this.

Another part of Togo's training was the study of Yomei, the Chinese philosopher, who preached the gospel of action. Since reaching manhood the admiral has spoken of the debt he owes this great teacher. Poise of soul is the cardinal virtue inculcated by the school of Yomei—balance, nerve, equilibrium, that cannot be disturbed by the flash of a sword in front of the eyes or the explosion of a shell however near it may be to him.

Another part of Togo's training was received in England, partly at the naval school at Greenwich and partly on board a man-of-war. At first he was not popular and had to stand all sorts of abuse. He took this with such stoicism that at the end he was liked mander who uses his subordinates like his own fingers, and the name of that man is Admiral Togo.

Japan's Most Popular Hero.

Once on meeting a party of foreign correspondents the little admiral heard his praises sung in several different languages. They cheered him; they drank his health. Through it all he stood impassive, with faraway eyes. He is not a vain man. Upon visiting his home he refused a popular reception, slipping in and out in secret, though he is the most popular hero of Japan and the people were eagerly awaiting to give him such an ovation as only the Japanese can give. He who is really great can afford to be humble.

He lives simply, has only one servant, and his house and his room aboard ship are almost without ornament. He smiles seldom. Two occasions only are on record. Once two English correspondents came to him with shaven heads, a sign of humiliation. "Why are you humiliated at seeing me?" he asked. "Because Port Arthur is so long in falling," they rejoined. At this he laughed outright. The other time was when the wireless flashed the news that the Russian fleet was coming out to meet him. And Togo smiled.

Attributes Victory to Mikado's Virtue. Admiral Togo makes few speeches, but one of these is noteworthy. The Japanese have a custom of addressing the spirits of the departed. At a public service for the purpose Togo spoke to the souls of those he had lost in battle. Very solemnly and simply he did this, telling them of the successes he had won and ascribing to them the victory. In his dispatches he attributes his success to the mikado's virtues.

Many exhorting appellations have been given to Togo. The one of the "ogre admiral" has been mentioned. A still earlier one was "the fighting admiral." The English and French have called him "the Japanese Nelson." But the most apt and expressive one perhaps is "Togo the Silent."

Admiral Togo's family, of which he is very fond, consists of three sons and one daughter. The boys are being educated for the navy.

WARM WEATHER IMPROVES TRADE

Advent of Summer Gives a Healthy Impetus to Business at Chicago.

STRIKE IS DETERRING FACTOR

End of Trouble With Teamsters Does Not Appear to Be Approaching.
Though Manufacturing Is not Affected.

Chicago, June 10.—The weekly review of trade in the Chicago district, published by R. G. Dun & Co. mercantile agency, says:

"With the advent of summer weather, business conditions continue to improve, and prevailing strike trouble is the only disturbing feature. The virulence of this has not abated, and its end does not appear to be in sight. Manufacturing operations, however, are being vigorously carried on, and other important activities show no slackness except in a limited way in building trade, owing to some check in the delivery of material. Production of finished goods in all lines is heavy, and orders are coming in freely. Wholesalers in staple merchandise report a fair volume of trade and larger deliveries.

Country Advances Satisfactory. "Money has been in fair demand without change in rates and bank exchanges show a large increase over those of the corresponding week in last year. Financial conditions are regarded as sound. Trading in local securities has been active. Advances from country points are of a generally satisfactory nature, although tempered by reports of heavy rains and floods in certain sections. Harvesting is in progress and growing steadily in breadth.

"Shipments of mill and furnace product are large. East bound rail shipments of flour were 56,114 barrels against 171,914 a year ago, and provisions 24,661 tons, against 23,028 a year ago. Receipts of lumber were 56,755,000 feet, against 32,929,000 a year ago. Live stock receipts were much heavier in all classes, and especially in sheep. Receipts of hides were 4,813,100 pounds, against 3,524,327 a year ago.

Grain Movement Is Decreased. "Grain receipts were 5,416,214 bushels, against 5,567,592 a year ago, and the shipments were 2,273,029 bushels, against 3,384,274, being a decrease of 8.2 per cent. Board of trade operations were upon an erratic market throughout the week, and closed at some decline in speculative values of the two leading cereals.

"Compared with closings a year ago, prices practically are unchanged in lard and ribs and show an advance of 5 cents a hundred weight in pork. Cash wheat is down 7 cents a bushel and corn 1 cent. Oats are unchanged. There is some small decline in cattle values, but those of hogs and sheep remain the same as last week.

"Failures in the Chicago district were nineteen, against thirteen last week and twenty-two a year ago."

VERY ANNOYING.

This Hardly Expresses What Janesville People Say of It.

Any itchininess of the skin is annoying. Little danger in itching skin diseases. But they make you miserable. Doan's Ointment is a never-failing cure. For Piles, Eczema, all itching troubles. Janesville citizens endorse it. L. Lawrence of 403 S. Franklin St., engineer at the Janesville Electric Light Co., says: "I tried about everything, recommended for itchy skin, but found nothing to give me relief until I struck Doan's Ointment at the People's drug store. I had an affection of the skin on my face, caused from the burning oil about the engine and dynamo. My face itched and annoyed me, and rubbing it only made it worse and made it sore. I could hardly stand shaving for the skin broke and bled. A few applications of Doan's Ointment removed the itching and healed up my face in a few days. I would not be without this remedy in my house and I certainly recommend it to others in need of such a preparation."

Sold for 50 cents per box by all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name "Doan's" and take no other.

GUND'S Peerless BEER

does the very same thing. It tones up the entire digestive system, by aiding the assimilation of food and this, as all know, brightens the lives of men. For over 30 years PEERLESS has been brewed from the very highest grade of malting barley—(our brewery is located in the heart of the world's finest barley growing district) and the hops we use are imported from old Bohemia. PEERLESS was awarded Gold Medal at St. Louis because of its brilliant amber color, rare full bodied flavor, and matchless purity. ## CHAPTER XIV.—(Continued.)

But the protuberance on his valise, which marked the sojourning place of the very rigid hair brush which was Mr. Lamm's constant traveling companion, soon pointed north instead of south. It was Mr. Thomas whom the detective followed. Seeing him enter the office of his newspaper, Mr. Lamm turned back, deposited his valise in his office, and betook himself to Court square.

"Nowak, how are you?"

"Quietly, quietly. How are the boys in the Globe office? I hardly ever see them nowadays, not even Kingman, whom I used to run across so often."

"Kingman?" said Mr. Nowak. "Oh, he's busy on the North mystery. Doesn't do anything else. Has his own time, and flits in and out of the office at all sorts of odd hours. Sometimes he's in a dozen times a day. And then, again, the editor may not see him for 24 hours or more. But Kingman is a privileged character, you know. He never wastes his time when he is on a job."

Mr. Lamm nodded his head emphatically. "You're right, Nowak. The word shirk is not in Kingman's F. Thomas' vocabulary. You are quite positive that he has not had any other work but the North case?"

"Oh, sure. They wouldn't take him off of it under any circumstances, now, when the facts are liable to come out any hour."

"I hope he isn't wasting his time and energy. It's a queer case, isn't it?"

"Deuced queer."

With a friendly hand-grasp the two parted. Mr. Lamm proceeding to a drug store close at hand, consulted the chained directory, and found in a minute a certain address desired. Boarding a car, he journeyed southward.

Where the streets began to show bits of garden in front of the houses, and every brick wall was not a party wall, Mr. Lamm alighted, and walked up a pleasant-looking avenue.

A new apartment house, not far from the corner, appeared to have particular interest for John Lamm. In its neighborhood, indeed, he passed the better part of an hour. Without apparent effort, Mr. Lamm entered into an easy conversation with several people there and thereabouts, and, as a result thereof, there was a sudden transfer of especial interest from the family hotel to the building next door.

Mr. Molon's modest dwelling was by no means equal in height to its neighbor. But its graveled roof, nevertheless, offered certain facilities that the detective greatly desired. A brief colloquy was all that proved necessary to gain the desired permission.

Once upon the roof, Mr. Lamm placed himself behind a sheltering chimney, and cautiously peered into the windows of the neighboring building that overlooked the place.

All the curtains were up, and the light, streaming cheerfully into what was evidently a sitting-room, brought into relief the face of a motherly-looking old lady, busied with her knitting.

Presently she looked up, and soon the sight of another face rewarded John Lamm's watch. It was the face of a short, rather thick-set young man, whose dark-brown, kindly eyes had looked into his own not many hours before.

The detective noted them carefully as they stood talking together earnestly. He saw them turn quickly, and as the rays of the setting sun shone through the glass, another form came into full view.

It was a woman's figure.

John Lamm looked with all his eyes. There was no mistake; no room for error. It was as he thought and hoped, and a smile of absolute satisfaction played about his lips unconsciously.

Suddenly he drew back. The thick-set young man in the room opposite was just turning around. Before he could peer out of the window, in his turn, the form was out of view. When the sidelong glance was next directed outwards the blinds were drawn over the tell-tale window. But the precaution came too late. The next moment Lamm found his way down the stairs, thanked Mr. Molon behind the counter kindly for his courtesy, walked up the street and took a car citywards.

"Ah, my black-haired friend," he thought, exultingly, "a very clever scheme of yours. But walls have eyes for John Lamm once in awhile, Kingman, and though you've kept your secret well from the crowd, you couldn't conceal it from your partner. What would Applebee say, what would Stackhouse say, for that matter, if they knew that Kingman & Thomas had a pretty guest, none other than the strangely missing Stella North?"

CHAPTER XV.

THE THING HAS A DARK LOOK.

"Come in, Kingman. You are prompt. I'm obliged to you."

Wednesday morning, and Detective Lamm at the threshold of his office was welcoming his friend, the reporter.

"Yes," said Thomas, unaware of the peculiar expression with which his associate regarded him. "Your note, left at the office, seemed to be urgent."

"You are right. It was urgent. Sit down."

John Lamm locked the door and put the key in his pocket. And standing with his back against it, said, seriously:

"Thomas, I have always considered you as an excellent detective. I have changed my mind."

"Well, what now?" asked Thomas, uneasily, glancing keenly at his friend, and thereafter avoiding his gaze.

"This," said Lamm, measuring his words; "the man who allows himself to be side-tracked in an important case by a pretty face and a pair of blue eyes has a cardinal weakness that sooner or later is sure to tell against him in business."

Thomas started, flushed, but controlled himself.

"Did you go clear to New York to find that out?"

"I have not been to New York," said Lamm, quietly. "I have been here in Boston, hard at work upon the latest and most curious feature of the North case."

"Come," said Thomas, desperately, "say what you mean. Don't talk in riddles."

"I mean that I know all about it, Thomas. I know that Kingman F. Thomas, who has done in his day as excellent detective work as anybody in the state, has at last fallen into the snare of the siren, and forgotten his duty. In other words, he is in love with one of the principals. Instead of arresting her he guards her. While the police are searching everywhere for her, he has her secretly hidden in his own house, right under their very noses, and comes to his best friend with a coolness that might (if he were a little less wary) have ruined his work on the case."

"John, you presume on your friendship," said Thomas, hotly. He had been nervously flinching his watch charm, and alternating between white and red, throughout Lamm's quiet speech but he now started up and faced the detective squarely.

"You have no right to assume that there is any sentiment in the matter. You go too far when you charge me with letting my personal feelings run away with my sense of duty. You don't know what my object was—is."

"Ah, but pardon me, Kingman; I assume that I do. If it had been in the ordinary course of your professional business, you would have come to me with it for advice or assistance, just as you have always done when we have associated ourselves on a case before. There is only one reason why you didn't come; you were more than afraid that I would never approve of so rash a proceeding on your part, and you were resolved upon taking the step at all hazards. In other words, Kingman, you were a little ashamed."

Thomas had regained control of himself. He drew himself up.

"See here, John Lamm, we will leave my motives out of the question, if you please. I have protected the girl. I propose to continue to do so. She was in a hard place—a harder one than you know anything about. I should have been less than a man if I had neglected to do what I did. To have given her up under the circumstances would have been the height of cruelty. You wouldn't have done it yourself. Every bit of circumstantial evidence was overwhelmingly against her. I determined to conceal her till I could discover at least proofs of her innocence sufficient to prevent her from the ignominy of an arrest. Since you have discovered the fact there is no help for it. You must aid me to keep the secret."

"Only upon one condition, Kingman. I must know all the facts."

"And, if I tell you everything, will you give me your word of honor not to use it against her or hers?" asked Thomas, with peculiar emphasis on the second pronoun.

"But isn't that rather broad?" Lamm hesitated.

Thomas compressed his lips tightly. "This girl has confessed everything to me, Lamm; and in return I have given her my word to do everything in my power to protect her family from disgrace. There's no way out of it. You must promise me."

"What do you mean?" demanded Lamm, sternly. "Do you mean if I find that the murderer of Paul North is in her family I am to keep it to myself?"

"Decidedly not," said Thomas. "But you must have proof, not appearances."

"Oh, certainly," said Lamm. "I agree to that. Hang the appearances in a case. They are seldom right. I use appearances only to enable me to get at the facts. But once I get at the facts, Thomas, understand me, it will make no difference whose family it is."

"Very well," said Thomas. "We understand each other. Give me your hand on it."

The two men shook hands over the compact and sat down close together beside the detective's desk.

"In the first place," began Thomas, "it was Stella North who threw the pistol into the water at Swampscott on Sunday night and then fled from her home."

"I had guessed as much when I learned that North's shooter had been found."

"At that time I hadn't the faintest idea who the fugitive was, and when I recognized her on the Connecticut roadside I was nearly as much astonished as she was frightened. The first thing I thought was that she must be guilty. All her actions—the headlong, precipitate flight; her terror at my appearance—all seemed to wear the look of criminality. She had faintly dead away, but she soon began to come to herself again. Thereupon I tied my horse to a tree, and drew her into the woods, out of sight of passers. She was so weak and emotional I believed her ripe for a confession. Lamm, I fully expected at that moment to be rewarded for my efforts by a tremendous discovery. But I tell you, as I looked at the poor thing—hardly a woman yet—lying there on the leaves, pale, speechless, frightened nearly out of her senses, I never felt so sorry for anybody in my life."

"I know the feeling," said Lamm. "I've had it myself. But go on."

"Well, when she came to I began to talk to her. Of course there was a scene. She broke down completely, and at her first words I understood what I ought to have had sense enough to have known from the first—that her terror was not on her own account."

"Oh, don't let them arrest her!" she kept saying. 'Don't, I beg of you! She's crazy! She must be! She never could have done it in her senses!'

"Oh, ho!" exclaimed the detective. "Sister Marion, eh?"

"Come," said Lamm, "tell me the whole story; it's the quickest way out of it. And I give you my word of honor I'll do what I can to help you. But it was a long time before I was able to bring her to the point of trusting me. I don't know how it was, exactly, but she gradually—"

"Pshaw!" said Lamm. "Don't embarrass yourself. Skip it. I know what happened as well as you do. She was in deep distress. You were in earnest. She trusted you. Good. What was her story?"

"She didn't tell me the whole story at that time," said Thomas. "I stopped her when I knew the essential facts, for I realized her danger and incidentally my own. I impressed upon her the necessity of obeying me implicitly. I told her there was but one way to save either herself or her sister, or both of them, from the ignominy of immediate arrest and all the attendant scandal. Frightened to death, almost, and shivering like a leaf, she acquiesced. I showed her as comfortably as I could in the bottom of the carriage, and covered her with a rug. Overcome with exhaustion, she, I believe, actually slept all the way to Vernon. Outside the town I awoke her, made her get out, and told her to follow me at a distance, and to board the train that I took, but by no means to speak to me. She was veiled, and had enough money to purchase her ticket."

"Capital! You are a shrewd one, Kingman. These precautions would never have occurred to another man."

"Ah! I knew, you see, that the whole police force must be on her track by this time. As soon as she was missed from Swampscott, I knew they would be in full chase, and she, in her innocence, had left a trail as plain as the milky way."

"Of course," said Detective Lamm, significantly.

1000 Tons Increase Over Any Previous Year

THE records show that last year I increased my coal business one thousand tons over any previous year. This increase is attributed to the exceedingly high grade Coal handled and the prompt and careful service accorded patrons.

The provident man looks ahead, and in summer it's well to look after your coal supply. This season I have the high grade Lehigh and Scranton Hard Coal, together with Pocahontas and West Virginia Splint. A full line of Cannel, Hocking, Illinois and other Soft Coals is also carried.

The Lehigh Coal comes direct from the mines by railroad, and is uniformly clean and exceptionally well sized.

Pocahontas is next in value to hard coal and is used largely for domestic purposes.

West Virginia Splint is also used for domestic purposes, and during the busy season from one to two car loads are sold each week.

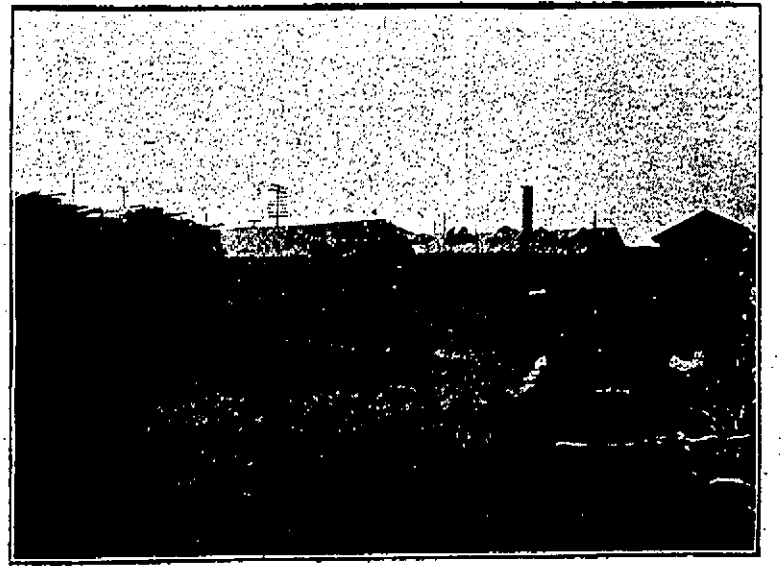

Coke has become of recent years a very popular and economical fuel. Its cleanliness, cheapness, ease with which it may be kindled, and intensity of the heat generated, make it very acceptable and last year our yard handled several hundred tons of it, with a great deal of satisfaction to those who purchased. June buyers should place their orders now. The stock was never of higher quality.

It has long been my ambition to have the model Coal Yard of Janesville, and a glance at the accompanying cuts will convince you that the goal has been reached.

We have erected a new up town office building at 62 South River St., where we will be pleased to meet you.

SMART LITTLE FLAT SHAPE

In this chapeau one of the latest and most youthful conceits in millinery is displayed. A flat brim sailor furnishes the motif, this covered with a plisse horsehair braid in a dead tone of white. The crown is shallow and the brim wide. The underlacing is of folds of mousseline loosely tacked to the brim. A deep band is tucked in at the left side of the back, this giving a very odd tilt to the shape, and on this a long plume is wreathed. The crown is simply encircled with a twist of white satin ribbon, with a simple loop knot on the side.
